Sickles Outlines Area Plans For Rapid Rail Transit

by Harvey Geller

Greenbelters may be able to ride the rapid transit rail system downtown Washington by 1980, Carlton R. Sickles stated at a meeting of the Greenbelt Democratic Club on October 24. Sickles, former congressman-at-large, and now Chairman of the Washington Suburban Transit Commission and Director of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA), gave a short history of the effort by various commissions and authorities to control and expand transit facilities in the metropolitan area.

Sickles told the audience of about 25 that a significant action was taken on October 20, when the WMATA tentatively accepted a metropolitan transit plan, including a subway system for the downtown area, with surface extensions to the suburbs linked with commuter and bus lines. Of importance to Greenbelt is the fact that of the three lines planned in Prince Georges County, one terminates at a station on Greenbelt Rd. near the B&O railway tracks. Engineers are now working up the details of the accepted plan; these will be published so that the public can become acquainted with the proposals. Public hearings will then be held, to obtain public reaction and to prepare needed legislation and approval from affected jurisdictions.

Timetable for Construction

The time table, according to Sickles, calls for construction to start in the fall of 1968. The first phase of the program will be the construction of two lines serving the center of Washington. One would run along Connecticut Ave. to the downtown area and then loop out along the B & O tracks to Silver Spring, the other from the Pentagon to downtown and then out to D. C. Stadium and Benning Road. These two lines should be completed by 1974. In the second phase of the construction program the rail systems will be extended to the suburbs. The completion of this basic system is set for sometime in 1980, but various components of the system will be put into operation earlier as they are completed.

This system, according to Sickles, will provide fast and frequent service. The trains, with an acceleration of 3 MPH per second, will reach speeds between stations of up to 75 MPH. Distances between stations will vary from 1,800 feet in the downtown area to about 2 miles in the suburbs. Headways throughout the system will be 2 minutes during rush hours and 4 minutes during the rest of the day, increasing to five and ten minutes at off hours and on weekends. The fares will be $.25 for the City portion of the system, with free transfer from buses. The charge for the suburban portion will be on a zone or miles-traveled basis, again with free bus transfers.

Details of the System

The system will be entirely modern in design. Cars will be completely air conditioned, with a public address system, and will be 75 feet in length, with trains varying in length up to eight cars. Four doors on each side will expedite loading and unloading of passengers. There will be comfortable seats for 81 passengers, and unimpeded aisles for standees.

The estimated cost of the entire system is $2.3 billion and it is to be financed by bonds, repayable out of the system's revenues and by capital grants of the participating governments. Projected population figures contemplate that the system will serve some 270,000,000 riders per year by 1990. The proposed rapid rail system will include over 95 miles in D.C. and two states, with 27.8 miles being in the Maryland suburbs.

Attempts will be made to make the use of the rapid rail system as convenient as possible. There will be direct lanes for patron bus-to-train and train-to-bus movement. Parking and riding will be facilitated by free parking spaces, primarily at the outlying stations. There will also be direct, convenient lanes for automobile approaches to the station entrances, so that wives can drive husbands to the train and still have use of the car during the day.

The final portion of Sickles' presentation was a slide show of some of the rapid transit systems around the world. There were pictures of trains, stations, and facilities from such cities as Montreal, Moscow, Oslo, Leningrad, and Toronto. Sickles expressed his hope that the best of these systems will be incorporated into the one planned for Washington.

Appeals Court to Hear Suit on School Site

On Tuesday, November 7, the Maryland Court of Appeals in Annapolis will hear the arguments of Greenbelt Homes, Inc., and the Prince Georges County Board of Education regarding a lower court's dismissal of GHI's request that the school board be restrained from constructing a senior high school on parcel 2.

Parcel 2 is the land between the GHI properties and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway which was selected by the school board for a three-school complex after it had originally chosen a city-preferred tract (parcel 15) near the Capital Beltway.

GHI, in its suit, contended that in reversing its decision the school board was "influenced by considerations other than the public interest," and that the school board was "substituting for its own judgment the pressures and influence which Bresler-Lerner (owners of the two tracts) were able to assert by reason of their ownership."

The school board denied this charge and argued that the GHI complaint was insufficient as a basis for relief in that the assertions of "pressures and influence" were mere contentions. It maintained that it has a right to act in its discretion without judicial interference unless fraud is involved.

City and GHI Near Agreement On Storm Drains, Sidewalks

by Al Skolnik

After months of negotiations, the city and Greenbelt Homes, Inc. are on the verge of agreeing on the division of responsibility for maintenance of storm drains. At the GHI board meeting of Thursday, Oct. 26, it was announced that the GHI-city joint committee had reached an understanding, clarifying uncertainties that have existed in this area since the Federal government gave up ownership of the housing project in 1953.

The agreement basically calls for GHI to maintain responsibility for the upkeep of the lateral drains, carrying water from roofs, and for the city to maintain the main storm drains. In practice, this division of responsibility has been followed in the past but the agreement will make it official. Such an agreement will pave the way for GHI homeowners to construct additions on sites which contained lateral drains. In the past such approval was withheld because of uncertainty as to who would bear the expense of repairing such storm drains where they passed beneath structures.

There was no opposition to the new agreement although director John O'Reilly felt that the membership should be fully informed of this responsibility the corporation was undertaking. Director Jim Smith stated that no new responsibilities were really involved since GHI was already maintaining the lateral drains as a matter of practicality. Smith also felt that the members were in favor of a resolution of the issue, pointing to the long delay encountered by several homeowners who wanted to build over such storm drains. Several board members also observed that the issue had been discussed at several board meetings during the last year.

The board decided not to take final action until the next meeting in order to give all interested parties a chance to study the agreement. O'Reilly suggested a special mailing to members, but the board felt that such treatment was out of proportion to the impact that the changeover would have on the corporation.

Other Business

The joint GHI-city committee also reached an understanding on the division of responsibility for the maintenance of sidewalks, with just a few areas still left unsettled. In general, the city will maintain interconnecting sidewalks, GHI will maintain those servicing its own homes.

GHI manager Roy Breashears reported that the county has agreed to have the real estate tax relief provisions for elderly property owners apply equally well to cooperative housing owners. There is a question, however, as to whether this action will be retroactive.

Regular board meetings for November will take place on the 9th and 16th because of Thanksgiving. The board will start budget meetings on November 2.

GHI is contemplating blacktopping the boat-trailer park and will poll users regarding their willingness to pay extra monthly charges to cover the cost. . . . The board turned down a request by a Southway resident for a free-standing carport which would exit directly on Southway. Reasons cited were safety hazards, undesirable precedent, and uncertainty caused by the contemplated widening of Southway road.

GDC Meeting

At the Greenbelt Development Corporation meeting preceding the regular GHI board meeting, it was agreed that certain charges made by GDC (operators of the apartments on Parkway) to GHI for janitorial services would be increased $600 a year. In turn, the GHI board at its meeting raised its charges $400 for services rendered GDC.

GDC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of GHI and boards of the two corporations have the same composition. Separate accounting records are kept for GHI and GDC and the above changes were made in order to reflect accurately the appropriate expenses incurred by each.

Breashears also announced that GDC will expend about $9,000 in replacement and major repair work on roofs and heating plants of its apartments. The board agreed to capitalize this amount over a period of 8-10 years, borrowing from commercial or other sources.

City Statement On Public Meetings

The following policy statement was issued last week by the Greenbelt City Council.

It is the policy of the City Council of Greenbelt, Maryland, to recognize the rights of all groups and individuals to express their views on matters of public interest and to conduct peaceful assemblies. To this extent, the City Council recently enacted an ordinance which prohibits any person from unreasonably obstructing, hampering, impeding, or interfering with any public meeting for which a public meeting reservation has been issued. Further, it is Council policy to make City facilities available to any organization, when such facilities are not being used for official City business. The Council regrets and disapproves the harassment of any group or law abiding citizens who are asserting their constitutional rights, such as freedom of speech and assembly, and will take any appropriate actions required to prevent any such harassment from taking place.

To Dedicate Memorial Tree For Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

The "Roosevelt tree," an oak on Crescent Rd. near the Baptist Church property which served as a vantage point for Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt to survey the construction of some of the first buildings in Greenbelt, will be marked off soon as a permanent memorial. A project of the Greenbelt Woman's Club, the tree will be enclosed by a wrought iron fence. As the city's contribution toward this project, the Public Works Dept. last week delivered the fencing to the site and will soon install it.

..... City Notes

The leaf vacuum machine has already begun a regular schedule. It will operate every Saturday and again early in every week throughout the leaf-raking season.

A city crew set up a number of new road-marking signs. Stop and Yield signs were placed at Lastner Lane and Boxwood. A No Dumping sign was set up at the end of Plateau Pl. The city crew also enlarged the paved areas under the play equipment at the lake park to prevent further erosion and installed a stove pipe for the wood-burning stove which furnishes the only heat for the old city warehouses.

Schrom Construction, Inc., which has been doing grading this summer in the Boxwood subdivision this week graded all the fill dirt which they have dumped, with the city's permission, on city property below the dam.

Some of the new curbing laid last week on Parkway Rd. has had to be taken up because it was damaged by the heavy rain on Wednesday before it had a chance to harden. Despite this setback all the Parkway curbing was expected to be finished this week.

Two large patches in the pavement at the foot of Lakeside at the entrance to University Square were paved by a contractor for the gas company.

Inspectors for the city designated a few minor corrections to be made in the streets of University Square before they can be formally dedicated to the city.

All curbing is now completed on the north side of Crescent between the two ends of Centerway. Pouring is in progress on a section between Parkway and the Hillside Rd. underpass, where Crescent is being widened for a paved parking lane. In case of some future need, this lane could be used to carry traffic.

All streets in the University Square development were paved last week and the city has been asked to approve them for final acceptance. The inspection prior to such approval will be conducted soon.

Greenbelt Grab-bag by Punchin' Judy

Greenbelt looks great in its autumn clothes. We step outside to hang out the wash and forget to go back in. A misguided azalea is blooming by the path, oblivious of the oak leaves twirling in their wind dance. The holly trees are busy. They like to get their Christmas decorations up early. The evergreens are thinking ahead too and freshening their wardrobe.

A jay is screaming from a tree top. "Thief, thief," he shrieks, and a squirrel returns a chattering string of abuse. The mockingbird has been silent most of the summer, but now he serenades the season in his best coloratura. The cat sits blinking on a carpet of sunlight and pretends to ignore all but the thin warmth.

State Dept., Peace Group To Discuss Vietnam War

A representative of the U. S. State Department and an officer of the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy (SANE) will present opposing arguments on the Vietnam war at a panel discussion scheduled for the City Council Room at 8 pm on Nov. 15, 1967. The panel discussion, sponsored by the Greenbelt Committee for Peace in Viet Nam, will be open to the public.

Robert Auerbach, CPVN chairman, said "In view of the mounting concern over the increasing tempo of the war, we are pleased to be able to offer Greenbelters the opportunity to participate in this discussion. In addition to hearing two different viewpoints expressed by authoritative speakers, the audience will be able to ask questions and express their own views."

Youth Council Meeting

Youth Council Chairman Art Castaldi urges all Greenbelt youth to come to GYC's next meeting at the Municipal Center on Thursday, November 9, at 7:30 p.m.

A decision was taken at the last meeting of GYC to request a meeting with the City Council to discuss the feasibility of placing pool tables in the Youth Center.

In answer to an inquiry from the Greenbelt Foundation for means of raising funds, GYC came up with the following possibilities: dinner-dance for adults, teen dance featuring a name band and bake sales. GYC's role would be mainly one of helping with the ticket sales.

Encouraging those who have reached the age of 21 to register to vote was discussed. Advisor William Barber hoped that GYC would play a vital role in this endeavor.

The Police Blotter

Police help has been requested in finding three run-away girls. One of them has been located at a relative's house in Florida.

Three suspects were apprehended when a window was broken at the laundromat at Beltway Plaza. They claimed that the damage was accidental and agreed to make restitution.

A young man was hospitalized with internal injuries and lacerations when his car struck a tree on Crescent Road near the Center.

Area Winner Sponsored By Toastmaster's Club

Harry Savage, of College Park, a member of the Greenbelt Toastmasters Club, won an Eastern Division District 36 Speech Contest on October 20 in Chevy Chase. He defeated five speakers who represented 600 Toastmasters in the metropolitan Washington area. His humorous speech was entitled "Reflections on a Vacation."

Toastmaster training in public speaking may not make you as great a speaker as Harry, but it can give you many opportunities to hear and observe others speak. Greenbelt Toastmasters meet the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month in the Co-op Hospitality Room. Information from John Downs, 474-4653.

Neglected Children

To the Editor:

There is a crime in the U.S.A. labelled "NEGLECT." It is inflicted on children, through no fault of their own. Many victims resemble refugees from a concentration camp.

No one can be punished for seeking aid for these children. At times I wonder how many children could have been spared from needless suffering, even death itself, if only those with the knowledge of a neglected or mistreated child had not closed their eyes to the facts, or refused to "get involved."

The next case of child neglect that you are made aware of, please, remember to help stop this ungodly crime.

As for the offenders themselves, I don't care to express my opinion; however, I will quote from the Bible, St. Matthew 18:6 "But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

LIFE... NEW LIFE

broken lives!

Whether tragedy strikes in the kindergarten or in later years, the pain is equally severe. But out of deep anguish a small child still can turn to hope: "Maybe daddy can fix." And if he can, the bright light of joy shines again.

Christian faith is divine intervention in a tragedy-ridden world. Broken lives are mended. The ultimate tragedy of the material world, death, gives way to its conqueror, Jesus Christ.

In Christ the ultimate enemy of man is conquered. The promise that changes everything is "Life—New Life." Jesus promised "Whoever lives and believes in me will never die"

Local Couple Flying High

by Sandra Barnes

To many Greenbelters, a sunny, fall week-end may mean a long drive through the topaz-splattered country-side. But one Greenbelt couple, my husband, Al, and I, arise on week-end mornings to gaze up at the clouds, study the winds, and finally call the weather forecaster to inquire about fronts, ceilings and visibility.

You see, my husband is a private pilot, and few things are as exciting to him as climbing into one of his club's four single-engined aircraft, pushing in on the throttle and pulling out on the nose wheel, and rising up into the heavens.

Many a week-end has found us dipping over the Virginia mountains to investigate a ski resort, crossing the Chesapeake Bay to have lunch at the Flying W Ranch in New Jersey, winging over New York City for a visit to the auto show and our favorite restaurant, Mama Leonie's, or just going up to Lancaster for the day to visit his parents. This summer we took our first really long trip to Expo '67, flying up along the Hudson River and the Thousand Islands, and finally viewing that fairyland at Montreal from the air.

Flying has provided us with many exciting adventures, both in the air and in the places of our destination. Of course, sometimes these adventures have been more exciting than we would have wished. For instance, there was the time we were going to New York and the engine started to die. My husband suspected carburetor icing and was able to correct the situation. Then, coming back from Montreal, the engine developed a most peculiar rumbling sound and we headed for the nearest airport in a hurry. The trouble turned out to be a cracked manifold on the exhaust. At 11,000 feet above the ground, such happenings can be frightening.

At other times, we have been discouraged with flying, as when the weather ruined our plans to go to Boston on three different occasions. Another time the storm clouds closed in over the mountains as we headed for Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. We were forced to spend the night in the thriving town of London-Corbin, and in the morning we had to start back to Greenbelt after coming within 100 miles of our goal. Nor were our problems over, as the cloud ceiling lowered further and we had to land in Bluefield, West Virginia. We ignominiously arrived home that week-end via a commercial airliner, having left our small plane behind. It was over a week before the weather finally cleared and the aircraft could be brought home.

All these circumstances have not in the least affected my husband's enthusiasm for flying. In fact, problems in the cockpit have heightened his desire to read and study as much as he can about aviation. Every day, it seems, maps arrive from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, pamphlets and booklets from the FAA and GPO, magazines and other literature from the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, not to mention the numerous publications he picks up at the newsstand.

Weather problems have increased his desire to obtain an instrument rating from the FAA. For this purpose we recently spent four days in Atlantic City, where he took a special course in instrument flying, 28 hours of instruction, followed by the FAA exam. Currently he is working on the 40 hours of instrument flying time needed before he can obtain his license to fly in bad weather.

Incidentally, while in Atlantic City, he signed me up for the Pinch-hitter's course, a special course for wives of pilots, and I received four hours of lessons in the ground and four hours of actual flying lessons. I am now qualified to handle the plane in an emergency—I think.

So, on any given week-end the Barnes of Greenbelt may be seen getting into their car, but rather than a ride in the country, it is only out to the airport for a ride instead in the nation's airways.

Speaking Sternly . . . by David Stern

Trick or Treat

"It's six o'clock - the witching hour", said our wife. "Do we have enough candy on hand this year?"

"Well - there are two bowls full," we replied. "Seems as if this should be enough, but then again - you can never tell with Hallowe'en."

"Just make sure . . ." our wife started saying something, but we never heard the end of it. Ding Dong! Ding Dong! Knock-knock-BANG-BANG-BANG! "Trick or Treat? Twick or Tweet?"

We rushed to the barricades, that is, to the front door. Goblins, witches, vampires, ghouls, banshees, djinns, devils and the whole Addams family. "Twick or Tweet?" We bribed them off with Tootsie rolls and they growled some thanks in return. There was some difficulty when they began descending the stairs, for a second shift was already coming there, pushing up and forward towards our door.

"Trick or Treat?"

We surveyed them: What hath Goodwill Industries rejected! We saw rags of all sizes, shapes and faded colors, and carbon-smudged faces to match. More candy bars - the bottom of the first bowl was already visible here and there. Wait - wait - there were some more, hurrying up to catch up with the rest.

We rushed to the kitchen to fetch the second bowl. We came back, just in time - our first bowl had given out - and the tumult outside sounded like a protest march on the Pentagon, while our wife was doing her best to calm spirits with promises of more goodies coming up. "Trick or Treat?"

Pirates, cowboys, Indians, sailors, soldiers, Superman, James Bond, football players, chimney sweeps, ballerinas, Princes Charming, frogs, Snow White and dwarfs of all sizes. "That's all you've got?"

The second bowl was running low even faster than the first one. "What else do we have?" whispered our wife.

"There are peanuts in the kitchen," we whispered back, "and can't you give them pennies instead of candy?"

We manned the breach while she darted to the kitchen, coming back a moment later with a bagful of nuts and an assortment of small change. "That's all I managed to find," she said. "Will you please check the pockets of your raincoat?"

The peanuts held the line for about five minutes, and the coins didn't last very far beyond that, even though we escalated from pennies to nickels and then to dimes. "Trick or Treat!" - it was like a mass rally, converging from all directions on our humble home.

"How about the apples in the refrigerator?" we suggested to our mate. The apples arrived and went, and so did the multitudes. Beatniks, Hippies, Red Guards, Vietcong, we lost all count and sense. The apples were followed by oranges, peaches and plums, then in desperation we tried sneaking into the bags some green peppers and cucumbers, but after we got some puzzled looks we quickly began searching for a better solution.

"How about pieces from our daughter's tinkertoy?" our wife suggested. "Many kids have sets of their own, maybe they'll appreciate it. We'll buy a new set tomorrow."

We tried. At first all went well. We palmed the little bitty parts into the bag so rapidly that no one saw the difference. Then, however, some particularly young astronaut grabbed the one we handed him, lifted it to his mouth and bit in - and that was the end of that.

Just then our daughter came back home, whooping and skipping with a bag full of loot. Suddenly we saw the light.

"Quick - give us the candy, we need it!"

"No, it's mine. I got it."

"Daddy will get you more candy tomorrow."

"Promise?"

"Promise."

We took the bag - it was heavy - and sat by the door in anticipation. Whatever was coming this way, we were ready.

Would you believe it - we never heard even one more "Trick or Treat?" that night. We don't know why - but you can be sure that it has a lot to do with the witching qualities of Hallowe'en. You just can't predict what is going to happen on such a night.

Be that as it may, next year we are going to be ready with a big bag full of acorns. Just in case.

Yorktown! Jamestown! Williamsburg! The eighth graders of GJHS could tell you all about them. On Saturday, Oct. 28 and Sunday, Oct. 29, they toured Yorktown, visited Jamestown and Jamestown Island, and toured Virginia's first capital, Williamsburg.

At Yorktown, the students gained knowledge about the surrender of Cornwallis, through a movie. Jamestown and Jamestown Island are the sites of Jamestown Fort and the three ships on which the first colonists came to America.

The city of Williamsburg was the main attraction, with visits to the Governor's Palace, the House of Burgesses, and the John Wyth home.

The eighth graders described the trip as "great."

The Golden Bears (soccer team) have had two wins, two ties, and one loss. Their most recent game, on October 27, resulted in a tie score. The next game, to be played on November 7, is a home game. Good luck, Bears.

Now — U. S. Savings Bonds Pay More Interest

4.15% when held to maturity

Higher interest on the Bonds you already own, too!

U.S. Savings Bonds are a better way to save than ever

Because now all Series E and Series H Bonds bought after December 1, 1965, will earn the new, higher interest rate of 4.15% when held to maturity. That's only 7 years for Series E — 9 months quicker than before. All H Bond interest checks will be larger beginning in June 1966.

And your outstanding Bonds will earn more, too, from now on. So, you don't have to cash in your present Bonds to get the attractive new rate. Ask about buying Bonds where you work or bank. For America's future. And yours.

"Today, none of us can remain aloof on the sidelines."

"Today, above all, is a time for all Americans to rededicate themselves to the spirit that animated the Minutemen of Concord—who serve as a symbol of the Savings Bond program. For today, as at the founding of our nation, it is freedom which is again at stake. Not all of us are called upon to fight in the jungles of Vietnam, but while our men are there, in the front lines of a distant land, none of us can remain aloof on the sidelines. We must all do our share—in every way we can—to support our men in Vietnam. One sure way is open to all Americans through the Savings Bond program."

A Pisano once again finished in the top ranks in the last duplicate bridge session. Two weeks ago Tony and Ann Pisano, playing as a team, finished first. The previous time Ann (playing with Sid Barnett) came in first and last week Tony (also playing with Sid Barnett) strode in first, 1½ points ahead of Adelaide and Ed. Kaighn. So how about it, bridge players, let's break up this cozy threesome. Next game: Friday, November 10.

Why pay 79¢ for an oven cleaner when you can have one for as little as $60?

The supermarket's full of oven cleaners, and over the years they cost you plenty. But they don't work unless you do—and hard! The electric self-cleaning oven is something else. It adds as little as $60 to the cost of your new electric range, but it's the last oven-cleaner you'll buy. And the happiest time to have it is now. Before the holiday birds come home to roast, and relatives descend on you. Before the party pies, cakes and casseroles go into the oven and you have to scrub up behind them. Make a clean sweep of the morning-after oven. A self-cleaning electric oven does it—for a thrifty 7¢ per cleaning.

See all the easy-cook, easy-clean ranges at The Electric Institute, Pepco Building, 10th & E Streets, N.W. Then see your dealer.
